

KU KLUX KLANNERS RIDE JACKSONVILLE

Florida Town Fears Trouble on Election Day Following Silent Parade.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 1.—Trouble is feared on Election Day here as a result of the parade through the city last night of 500 members of the Ku Klux Klan, who are said to represent a very small proportion of the total membership in the city.

Election Day significance is attached to the banners which the white-masked followers of the flaming cross carried, the banners reading: "We were here yesterday; we are here forever."

The parade, notice of which was given several days ago in the newspapers, was made the subject of urgent representations by national negro organizations, who plead with the police department and also State officials not to permit the parade. As no motion was made in any quarter to comply with the negro requests, it was small wonder that when the long white-robed parade came in sight down the main street there were very few if any negroes abroad, either in the business section or, in fact, in any part of the city. With the coming of darkness most of the negro population got indoors.

The notice of the parade stated that members of the Ku Klux Klan from neighboring cities would take part. It also stated that it would be useless to attempt to ascertain who the members of the Klan were. As a matter of fact, no one is even vouchsafed the information as to where the Klan assembled or where it disbanded.

VET AND 28 DESCENDANTS WILL VOTE FOR HARDING

MASONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Not only Andrew Cunningham, seventy-five, a veteran of the civil war, but also each of his twenty-eight descendants, is going to vote for Harding and Coolidge.

The aged veteran declared that he would disown his descendants if they did not vote for the Republican candidate. At the close of the meeting, which was attended by 500 or 600 persons, a straw vote was taken. Not a Cox vote was cast.

Club Holds Masquerade.

A costume dance was given Saturday night by the Ku Klux Klan Club, an organization recently formed by students of the Corcoran School of Art. The studios were decorated with autumn leaves and flowers.

GIVE US POWDER OR WE QUIT, SAY GIRLS

Chorus Refuses to Pay for Fragrant Talcum, So Producer Yields.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—If it isn't one thing, it's two things. Just when everything has been running along so nicely at the Selwyn Theater, with "Tickle Me" not having played to a vacant seat since the orchestra made the audience stand up with "The Star Spangled Banner," dashed if the chorines of this musical comedy didn't serve notice to Arthur Hammerstein that they would be "striking beauties" in another sense if the manager didn't—well, here's the way of it: Rejoicing in the denomination of the chorus that hates clothes, the "Tickle Me" coryphees, on account of the generous exposure of their alabaster wares, have been obliged to bathe themselves virtually in freight-car quantities of talcum powder.

Incidentally, this may account for the present market shortage of this feminine commodity. Anyway the girls have been paying for this talcum powder out of their own gold mesh pocketbooks, and when the high limousine upkeep is considered, the talcum expense is no mean item to these poor girls.

To double the expense, too, the "Sacred Bath" scene in "Tickle Me," which presents the girls in little more than a smile and look of concern, demands another coat of powder after the girls are dried off.

Last night Arthur Hammerstein, who had been wholly unaware of such expense to the girls, readily promised a committee of the "Tickle Me" chorus that hereafter he will himself pay for the regular weekly truckload of talcum powder. The girls had won the manager over without a murmur, when they pointed out to him that he was under no expense whatever for stockings in "Tickle Me."

GOES TO CHAIN GANG FOR BILKING BLIND MAN

AMERUCUS, Ga., Nov. 1.—Twelve months on the chain gang was given Henry Otis, alias Overall Charlie, negro, in the city court of Americus for having passed a worthless piece of newspaper on Sumter's blind coroner for a $1 bill.

Coroner Jenkins, on the stand, readily identified the paper given to him by the negro after passing it between his fingers.

Attorney Robert C. Lane, who defended Otis, attempted to confuse the blind coroner by handing him other pieces of paper, but each of these was quickly rejected as not being the right paper.
